Pedestrian Planning & Design: NZ Guidelines

Land Transport NZ recently published a Pedestrian Planning and Design Guide to assist transport planners and engineers. The Guide promotes a consistent 'best practice' approach to planning, designing, operating and maintaining walking infrastructure and networks in New Zealand. It sets out ways to improve the walking environment, outlining a process for deciding on the type of provision that should be made for pedestrians, and providing detailed design guidance. Other tools supplement the guide: a spreadsheet for calculating user delays, costs and benefits for road crossing options; and a user audit tool for ensuring that walking, cycling and equestrian needs are fully considered. This workshop will outline the Guide's development and content and demonstrate how these tools can assist in providing for pedestrians.

The Guide is available at www.levelofservice.com Those attending the workshop would benefit from downloading and looking at the Guide.
